

An air-moisture permeable, insulated covering is placed over compost material to accelerate composting. The invention improves upon the current covering methods by providing an all-in-one solution that retains warmth, provides for evaporation of excessive moisture, and allows air convection to provide an ideal environment for microorganism activities.