

Abstract

The invention is a covering for compost to accelerate the composting process. The invention improves upon the current covering methods by providing an all-in-one solution that retains warmth, provides for evaporation of excessive moisture, and allows air convection to provide an ideal environment for microorganism activities.